

Day #3 Activity #3

So Much Time to Read

Here we are in day 3 of our new world and during this time of home confinement, we have a great opportunity to catch up on some reading whether it be a book or a magazine or something online. So, what are you reading? I'm reading a short book of speeches Titled: Greta Thunberg: No one is too small to make a difference. It's an inspiring book full of the wisdom of a young person asking us to care about our planet and environment. She is as passionate about this subject as anyone could be. I'm always amazed at how one person can inspire so many.

Write about it.

Write about your reading habits this week or the book you are reading now and your thoughts about it. Why do you like it if you do? If it's fiction, who is the main character and what is he or she like? If it's nonfiction, what is the subject and why are you drawn to it? Or, if you are not reading just yet, write about why you are not reading? What are you doing with this valuable time of yours?
